

Media and Cultural Diversity.

Where do We Need to Go?

The Panos Paris Institute, in association with the University of Westminster, is delighted to invite you to a presentation and debate on the future for media representations of cultural diversity, followed by a reception. This event will mark the publication of a study entitled “Media and Cultural Diversity in Europe and North America”, conducted by the Panos Paris Institute, edited by Claire Frachon and coordinated by Virginie Sassoon, and published by Karthala.

Thursday 19 November 2009

6.30 pm to 8 pm

- What are the study’s most significant findings?
- What innovative actions and best practices does it highlight?
- What prospects does it see for the future?

A panel of contributors to the study will discuss these and other questions with an audience of journalists and media practitioners, policy makers, academics, activists and concerned observers. All are welcome.

Panellists:

- Mukti Jain Campion (UK), Author and producer, Culture Wise
- Claire Frachon (France), Journalist and European media consultant
- Myria Georgiou (UK), Dept of Media and Communications, London School of Economics and Political Science
- Alec G. Hargreaves (USA), Director, Winthrop-King Institute for Contemporary French and Francophone Studies, Florida State University

Moderator:

- Tarik Sabry, Senior Lecturer in Media and Communication Theory, University of Westminster

Venue: University of Westminster, Regent Street Campus,

309 Regent Street, London W1 (Oxford Circus Underground Station)

To secure your place at this event, please RSVP to Gabrielle Beyl at:
diversity-debate@panosparis.org

Please confirm before November the 16th

For more information:

Institut Panos Paris
10, rue du Mail – 75002 Paris
Tel: +33 1 40 41 05 50
Fax: +33 1 40 41 03 30

panos@panosparis.org

Website: www.panosparis.org

INVITATION